

We have been working hard last week to move to a new support system, which is now live at <http://support.azrul.com> . I've transferred all your purchased record to the new system. You should be able to download all updates from your account page from now onwards.

We love to help you and we are dedicated in replying all emails, but we are hoping that you'll take advantage of the knowledge base. Do spend a few minutes browsing through it before sending us an email/ticket. You might be able to solve your issues faster than typing an email. The less email we receive the more time we have to focus on doing what we love most, coding and improving the components, which eventually means that you guys get a better components!